

Seed Availability

Granite Seed Company makes a concerted effort to stock, in sufficient quantity, every species listed on this website. We determine the quantity we need to stock based on usage data from previous years.

However, when unusual events occur—such as a devastating fire year or inordinately poor crop production—we may run out of seed for a particular species before the new crop becomes available.

To ensure that you get the species and quantities you require, please contact us as soon as your needs are known so we can reserve seed for your project.

Certified seed and source-identified seed are often available if required for your project. If your project requires local origin seed or species that are not typically available commercially, you may want to plan ahead and arrange a special collection or grow-out.
